WE CONDUCT RESEARCH

- Biochar: How can we create efficient carbon sinks and improve the soil quality?
- Mangrove Natural Regeneration: How can we use the self-sustaining capacity of mangrove ecosystems?
- Biodiversity: What is the composition of homestead tree species in the Sundarbans?

WE IMPLEMENT PROJECTS

- Sustainable Plastic Waste Management: Setting-up waste management systems run as social businesses
- Transforming the agricultural practice of farmers towards climate smart agriculture
- Preserving and distributing indigenous seeds

WE CREATE AWARENESS

- Global South meets Nürtingen: educational program for students in Germany to learn about the Sundarbans challenges and potentials at hand
- Follow us on social media for more information: You can find us on LinkedIn, Instagram & Facebook

OUR IMPACT

At Regenerate Sundarbans, we work together: local stakeholders, NGOs, scientists, and anyone who is committed to making the Sundarbans a cleaner and safer place to live. Because problems such as climate change, plastic waste and loss of biodiversity can only be solved together in a globalized world.

When everyone contributes their expertise and experience, everyone will benefit in the end.

ABOUT THE SUNDARBANS

The Sundarbans are a fascinating ecosystem stretching along the coast of Bangladesh and India. Covering an area of over 10,000 square kilometers, the mangrove forests provide a unique and diverse environment that is important for both wildlife and people. About 5 million people live in the Indian part, many of them working in fishing and agriculture.

Soceo is a not-for-profit project management, research and consulting agency based in Nürtingen, Germany and impacting at the intersection of entrepreneurship and environment.
